《THE SNOW MAN》

WALLACE STEVENS

One must have a mind of winter .
To regard the frost and the boughs .
Of the pine-trees crusted with snow ;

And have been cold a long time
To behold the junipers shagged with ice,
The spruces rough in the distant glitter

Of the January sun;
and not to think
Of any misery in the sound of the wind,
In the sound of a few leaves,

Which is the sound of the land
Full of the same wind
That is blowing in the same bare place — —

For the listener, who listens in the snow,
And, nothing himself, beholds
Nothing that is not there and the nothing that is.
